Authorization for this examiner's amendment was given in a telephone interview with Mr. J.B. Kraft on 09/17/04.

The application has been amended as follows:

Claims 5, 12, 19 are canceled.

Claim 1:

In a computer controlled user interactive display system, a display interface implementation for directing a user's attention to specific selectable items on display screen with crowded selectable items comprising;

user controlled means for moving an on-screen pointer to approach said selectable items; and

means for automatically sequentially highlighting each item in said selectable items when said approaching pointer is within a predetermined distance from said items.

Claim 8:

A method for directing a user's attention to specific selectable items on a display screen with crowded selectable items in computer controlled user interactive display systems comprising:

moving an on-screen pointer to approach said selectable items; and

[highlighting all items in any set of a plurality of said items wherein each item in the set is within a predetermined distance of said approaching pointer.]

automatically sequentially highlighting each item in said selectable items when said approaching pointer is within a predetermined distance from said items.

Claim 15:

A computer program having program code included on a computer readable medium for directing a user's attention to specific selectable items on a display screen with crowded selectable items in computer controlled user interactive display systems comprising:

user controlled means for moving an on-screen pointer to approach said selectable items; and

Claim 22:

In a computer controlled user interactive display system, a display interface implementation for directing a user's attention to specific selectable items on a display screen with crowded selectable items comprising:

user controlled means for moving an on-screen pointer to approach a cluster of said selectable items; and means for automatically sequentially highlighting each item in said cluster when said approaching pointer is within a predetermined distance from said cluster.

Claim 23:

In a computer controlled user interactive display system, a display interface implementation for directing a user's attention to specific selectable items on a display screen with crowded selectable items comprising:

user controlled means for moving an on-screen pointer to approach a cluster of said selectable items;

means for determining whether the items in said cluster have sufficient separation for said pointer to select separate items in said cluster; and .

Claim 25:

A method for directing a user's attention to specific selectable items on a display screen with crowded selectable items in computer controlled user interactive display systems comprising:

moving an on-screen pointer to approach a cluster of said selectable items; and automatically sequentially highlighting each item in said cluster when said approaching pointer is within a predetermined distance from said cluster.

Claim 26:

A method for directing a user's attention to specific selectable items on a display screen with crowded selectable items in computer controlled user interactive display systems comprising:

moving an on-screen pointer to approach a cluster of said selectable items; determining whether the items in said cluster have sufficient separation for said pointer to select separate items in said cluster; and automatically sequentially highlighting each item in said cluster responsive to a determination that there is insufficient separation.

Claim 28:

A computer program having program code included on a computer readable medium for directing a user's attention to specific selectable items on a display screen with crowded selectable items in computer controlled user interactive display systems comprising:

user controlled means for moving an on screen pointer to approach a cluster of said selectable items; and

means for automatically sequentially highlighting each item in said cluster when said approaching pointer is within a determined distance from said cluster.

Claim 29:

A computer program having program code included on a computer readable medium for directing a user's attention to specific selectable items on a display screen with crowded selectable items in computer controlled user interactive display systems comprising:

user controlled means for moving an on-screen pointer to approach a cluster of said selectable items;

means for determining whether the items in said cluster have sufficient separation for said pointer to select separate items in said cluster; and

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The Examiner has carefully considered the independent claims 1, 8, 15, 22, 23, 25, 26, 28 and 29. The "method" and "system" for a display interface implementation for directing a user's attention to specific selectable items on a display screen with crowded selectable items was not taught or suggested by the prior arts. The system and method for a computer implemented method and corresponding apparatus for user controlled means for moving an on-screen pointer to approach a cluster of said selectable items are well known in the art. However, they do not teach or suggest means for automatically sequentially highlighting each item in said cluster when said approaching pointer is within a predetermined distance from said cluster.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
